

Introducing a new website that provides you with resources for everything related to your practice of reflexology. Within the website, you will find the following sections:

- A journal of 100's of published research studies presented in date order and in subject categories.
- Listings of professional reflexology practitioners around the world – can you find yourself?
- A library of over 800 publications from 1917 to the present, also presented in categories – including books, charts, DVD's, CD's and videos.
- Listings of online courses and online conferences available for your professional development.
- Carefully selected resources to assist you with your business and marketing
- Listings of reflexology related products
- Popular reflexology chat lines where you can seek advice from colleagues around the world.
- Over 200 health conditions described with causes, symptoms, related reflexes, research and related publications.
- Guidance for ethical conundrums that you might encounter in your practice.
- Listing of reflexology associations and organizations around the world.
- An introduction to medical terminology
- Resources for your self-care.

All information is provided with links to sources - which you can use to expand your knowledge of topics related to reflexology.

This website will support you with easily accessible information that you can use when building your business, designing your marketing or promoting reflexology by writing articles, designing a brochure, creating a website, preparing a public presentation, etc. Similarly, you can use the information to provide accurate information for your clients when they ask about many aspects of reflexology, including the benefits.

In and of itself, the sheer volume of reflexology information available is very impressive when displayed together. Suffice it to say, that the potential uses of the website are far too many to list here. I encourage you to put it to good use, and, enjoy exploring the various sections that attract you - at your leisure:
